The new interview below features Jesse Beltran, who presents himself as a technical investigator of anomalous electromagnetic phenomena associated with Havana Syndrome cases. He claims that after the COVID vaccine rollout, his team observed similar electromagnetic signatures in vaccinated individuals, including alleged radio-frequency emissions and detection of semiconductor-like responses in the human body using specialized equipment. He further alleges that these phenomena may be connected to nanotechnology, lipid nanoparticles, or graphene-based materials, and ties these claims to broader concerns about surveillance, transhumanism, and experimentation without informed consent.

The interview also asserts that legal frameworks, particularly provisions of the 21st Century Cures Act, allow certain types of research to be shielded from public disclosure, even from FOIA requests, under national-security or IRB protections. Viewers are encouraged to interpret these claims as evidence of systemic overreach and to take political and personal action.

It raises legitimate questions about:

- transparency in biomedical research
- limits of informed consent
- the expansion of surveillance technologies
- public trust after the pandemic
- and how fear, secrecy, and authority interact in times of crisis

The big question for myself is – Can our free will be highjacked by technology? Apparently, it can.

Video Description

A new documentary might be the most mind blowing report we've ever seen on the covid vaccine. If took the shot your body is acting as a transmitter. One of the most eye opening scenes from the trailer shows signals being received... and then camera pans back and you realize the signals are coming from underground... in the corpses in the graveyard... people that had taken the shot... now dead... but still sending a signal. You won't want to miss this discussion.
